

What insights into American experience do we gain by reading nineteenth- and twentieth-century texts in which Southern women engage questions of gender, class, race, labor, and region? In this course, we will explore fictional and nonfictional prose by and about Southern women in order to examine how historical, cultural, and sociopolitical factors have shaped the lives and writings of women in the South.

This class fulfills the writing (W) requirement.

AMS 340/WS 342:

Women in the South

Dr. Hubbs